

The Daily Courant.

Wednesday, June 4. 1707.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated June 7.

Vienna, May 25.

THE King of Sweden insisting peremptorily that Satisfaction be given him on his Demands, the Emperour has caus'd C. Zobor to be brought hither, and order'd the Fiscal to prosecute him forthwith, for using indecent Language towards Baron Stralenheim. His Imperial Majesty has likewise sent Order to Count Eck, who commands on the River Marck, to send some Squadrons after the Muscovites who fled from the Rhine and are retiring thro' Moravia to Poland, to stop them and bring them back, that they may be deliver'd up to the King of Sweden: But 'tis believ'd 'twill be impossible to overtake them, because they are already far advanc'd on their Way, and by hiring Waggons keep going Day and Night.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated June 11.

Vienna, May 28. Count Eck sent a Detachment of Horse in Pursuit of the Muscovites who took their Way to Poland by the Pass of Jablunka; but tho' that Detachment made so much Haste after them that 20 of their Horses drop'd in the Road, 'twas to no purpose; for we have Advice that the Muscovites are arriv'd safe at Warsaw.

Hamburg, June 7. 'Tis advis'd from Saxony, that King Augustus had sent Councillor Robelen and General Kanitz to the King of Sweden, to desire a right Information touching the intended March of the Swedes, and to urge his Swedish Majesty to give a plain Answer. P. S. This Evening we receiv'd Letters from Leipzig dated the 4th Instant, advising that the King of Sweden had spent several Days in mustering his Troops, and that they are to march out of Saxony the 18th Instant.

Hague, June 7. 'Upon the Advices that came in Yesterday of the Progress of the Enemy in Germany, the States took Occasion to order Deputies to make a solemn and vigorous Remonstrance to the Ministers of the Germanick Body residing here. The Deputies acquitted themselves of their Commission in such earnest and pathetick Terms, as might make those Ministers reflect with Confusion on the Supineness with which their Principals may with just Cause be reproach'd; and in Conclusion exhorted them to write to their Masters to hasten the March of their Quotas of Troops, and to do what more they are able, for redressing the shatter'd Affairs of the Empire. They told the Emperour's Minister in particular, that of all others the Court of Vienna ought certainly to do the best they can, and yet the Troops they should have sent to the Rhine are still in Bavaria: He answer'd 'twas true they are still in Bavaria, but they are there out of Necessity, because Affairs in that Country are in a very unsettled Posture. To keep the King of Portugal firm in the Alliance, the States have paid his Envoy here Part of the Subsidies due to him, and are about to make further Remittances to Lisbon, with Assurances of supporting him to the utmost of their Power: We learn from England, that her Britannick Majesty has taken like prudent Measures. Yesterday several Ministers of the Empire, as the Prussian Envoy, that of Wirtemberg, and others, made Instances to the States Deputies in the Congress, that the Troops of King Augustus which Great-Britain and Holland have taken into their Service, may now be employ'd in Germany: 'Tis suppos'd their High Mightinesses will consider this Proposition, and conform themselves to the Resolution her Majesty shall take upon it. The Regiments that were sent up to Munster are coming back to Brabant with all Expedition; and the States have desir'd the Regiment of Nagel may return likewise: That Demand will do doubt be easily comply'd with; for we have Advice that the Deputies of his Highness of Paderborn have taken Possession of the Bishoprick of Munster, and caus'd Te Deum to be sung in the Cathedral; and the Chapter have readily given up the Administration of the Bishoprick to his Highness, who has thereupon treated them very magnificently. Count Maffei, who was to have gone to the Court of Berlin, having receiv'd Letters by an Express from Turin, set out to Day for Brabant to confer with the Duke of Marlborough: The Emperour's Envoy is likewise gone to his Grace.

Hague, June 10. 'Tis surmis'd by the most intelligent Persons here, that the Business the Emperour's Minister is gone about to the Duke of Marlborough, is to represent to him the Reasons upon which the Court of Vienna prosecute their Design upon the Kingdom of Naples: And some think he will likewise confer with his Grace upon the Apprehension that Court is in of the Swedes; who have found a new Subject of Dispute with the Emperour: 'Tis this, Baron Stralenheim in his Journey from Vienna to Saxony met in Bohemia the Muscovite Troops in their Flight from the Rhine to Poland: To get clear of them, he order'd his Servants to tell the Muscovite Officers that he was Count Wackerbaerd the Saxon General: The Swedes give out that those Officers being deceiv'd by that Fiction, fairly own'd to Baron Stralenheim, that they were making their Escape with the Connivance of the Imperial Court. M. Duyvenvoorde, President of the Council of State of this Province of Holland, died here the 8th Instant. His excellent Qualities make him universally lamented. The College of Nobles of this Province are to appoint his Successour on their Part in the said Council of State: M. d'Obdam who is the Eldest Member of that College, is like to be chosen for that high Dignity, which in a Manner gives the Person that is possess'd of it the Direction of all the Affairs of the Province. 'Tis true that civil Trust is incompatible with the military, and therefore M. d'Obdam cannot have it without giving up his Commission of General of the Horse, his Government of Boisseduc, and his Regiment of Horse, which are worth him 40000 Florins a Year.
